Hundreds finger-brush their dogs' teeth for world record

Dog day afternoon.

Dog owners took a crack at a Guinness World Record at the Somerville Dog Festival on Sunday.

It was shaping up to be a historic day for Massachusetts dogs the state over Sunday as hundreds turned out to get their teeth brushed at once and break a Guinness World Record.

Armed with special finger brushes and hundreds of tubes of "poultry flavor" toothpaste, the pooches' owners scrubbed their K-9's chompers simultaneously. The old record for doing so was 268. No word was available yet on whether festivalgoers bested it.

The event was the main attraction at the sixth annual Somerville Dog Festival at Trum Field, a free gathering run by the Somerville Foundation for Animals that spreads awareness about dog health and also raises money for local canine-related charities.

The brush-off doubled as education for owners, said Marjie Alonso, a festival organizer and record-attempt emcee.

"Everybody hates brushing their dog's teeth," Alonso told Metro.

But they should be doing it, she said — once a day, because crummy teeth can lead to health issues in dogs.

"We thought it would be fun to help people do this," she said. "Give them a sample and show them how to start, in a friendly, light way."

started, Stephanie Birkhimer of Burlington was prepping 5-year-old Kermit by letting the excited corgi Lab mix lick some samples of the chicken-flavored cleaning goop.

"He likes to be included in everything," Birkhimer said.

The meat paste is key when it comes to brush-ing a dog's teeth, said Karina Mroczko, owner of a 1-year-old mini golden doodle named Freddy, who was also getting ready to take part.

"He actually has this one in a full-size from his vet and he loves it," Mroczko said. "He just loves licking it, and that's when I get the chance to put my finger in there."

Marilyn Gonzalez said she hadn't been brushing her three dogs' teeth, but was inspired by the record attempt to start.

"They liked it!" Gonzalez said of the pups — pugs Roger and Spanky, and Wonton, a Pekingese. "I'm definitely going to start [brushing]."

A pair of comedians warmed up the crowd before the attempt: "I've heard of a rough crowd, but this is ridiculous," said stand-up Casey Malone. "I've never seen a crowd play dead before."

Festival organizer Kelsey Roth filmed the action from an adjacent set of bleachers, overlooking a set of fenced-in corrals manned by dog experts and swarmed with volunteers counting pups with clickers and keeping track of entrants' names on clipboards. The fact-checkers at Guinness headquarters in London would later approve the attempt, sifting through the array of evidence and studying the footage, Roth said.

"We didn't realize how involved it would be," Roth said, but "it's been great for the festival, it's gotten us a lot of attention and at the end of the day that's great for dogs and animals."

They're clunky, frustrating, awkward-to-use hunks of plastic. And the organizers of Somerville's Toy Camera Festival are in love with them.

The city this year was hosting its third-annual fest starting on Thursday, exhibiting works of art made with cameras much more low-tech and difficult to operate than your iPhone, but with much-cooler "filters," organizers said.

Instead of blanketing pictures with an Instagram haze of "Valencia" or "Mayfair," the festival's artist-enthusiasts said they rely on the engineering quirks of old relics.

"Some of the cameras are poorly made and have light leaks, so that leads to fogging or color splotches on the film," said Lee Kilpatrick, who directs the Washington Street art gallery. "Basically all those effects that you have on Instagram are sort of mimicking toy camera effects. In fact, I know someone teaching an art class and she mentioned this, and half the kids had no idea."

Though there is some controversy over what counts as "toy," the rules are basically that, to qualify, light and focus controls on a camera need to be difficult or impossible to adjust, Kilpatrick said.

The Somerville festival features more than 100 pieces of art in three galleries and is probably the biggest of its kind in the world, Kilpatrick said. Fifteen countries were represented in last year's gallery exhibits, he said.

Samples on the festival's website show off some of the tools' possibilities: a washed-out lakeside vista, an over-saturated herd of horses on a farm, a man sitting in front of two TV's and their twin blasts of glare. One of shots is a kind-of-blurry snap of a toddler throwing a tantrum.

Video. BPD and BU students team up for rape prevention

A student-made video being promoted by Boston police this week takes aim at jokes about rape and offers advice for college kids on preventing sexual assault.

"What Happens After a Girl Walks into a Bar?" came from students with Boston University's Hot-house Productions. The edgy six-minute cinematic public service announcement leads with clips of bits from Comedy Central's "The Daily Show" and TV cartoons "Family Guy" and "South Park" that mention assault for laughs.

"The word 'rape' is not comedic," says Lt. Det. George Juliano of Boston police's sexual assault unit in the video. "When college students go out and they drink, they can find themselves in real danger of sexual assault and rape."

Five things you need to know

Al Qaeda chief urges lone wolf attacks, unity

Al Qaeda leader Ayman al-Zawahri called on young Muslim men in the United States and other Western countries to carry out attacks inside there and urged greater unity between militants.

"I call on all Muslims who can harm the countries of the crusader coalition not to hesitate. We must now focus on moving the war to the heart of the homes and cities of the crusader West and specifically America," he said in an audio recording posted online on Sunday, referring to nations making up the Western-led coalition in Iraq and Syria.

He suggested Muslim youth in the West take the Tsarnaev and Kouachi brothers, who carried out the Boston marathon bombings and Charlie Hebdo shootings in Paris respectively, and others as examples to follow.

It was not clear when the recording was made but references to former Taliban leader Mullah Mohamed Omar as being alive suggest it is at least two months old. Omar's death was announced by Afghanistan's government in late July.

Zawahri reiterated his position on Islamic State, repeating what he said in a recording posted on Wednesday - that he viewed the group's claim to be a caliphate as illegitimate but would join them in fighting Western and secular forces in Iraq and Syria. REUTERS

Death toll from Okla. prison fight rises to four

A fourth inmate has died and three others remained hospitalized on Sunday, a day after a fight broke out at a privately owned prison in Oklahoma, prison and state officials said.

The "inmate-on-inmate altercation" at the Cimarron Correctional Facility lasted less than two minutes on Saturday afternoon, according to the Corrections Corporation of America, which owns and operates the prison in Oklahoma.

Three inmates appear to have been stabbed to death and a fourth later died at a medical facility, state Department of Corrections spokesman Alex Gerszewski said on Sunday. REUTERS

India police hunt for owner of explosives after blast

Indian police said on Sunday they were hunting for the owner of illegally stored explosives which accidentally detonated in the center of a crowded town, killing at least 88 people.

Rajendra Kaswa, a local businessman, has been charged with illegally storing gelatin sticks and other explosives next to a restaurant and busy junction in the town of Petlawad in central India, officials said. He also faces charges of criminal negligence and culpable homicide.

"He is on the run. One of his accomplices has already been arrested. REUTERS

Thousands evacuated as wildfires sweep on

Gov. Jerry Brown declared a state of emergency on Sunday in Northern California areas hit by a fast-expanding wildfire that injured four firefighters and forced thousands of people to evacuate small towns near wine country.

The firefighters were hospitalized with second-degree burns after they were dropped off by helicopter to build containment lines against the so-called Valley Fire, which broke out on Saturday in Lake County, north of San Francisco and then spread quickly in hot weather and drought conditions. REUTERS

Trump says high pay for CEOs is a joke, 'disgraceful'

Donald Trump said on Sunday high salaries paid to chief executives were a "joke" and a "disgrace" and said these were often approved by company boards stacked with the CEO's friends.

Trump said on CBS's "Face the Nation" that it was hard to tackle the question of corporate pay because too many corporate boards lacked independence.

"It's disgraceful. Sometimes the boards rule but I would probably say it's less than 10 percent; and you see these guys making enormous amounts of money. It's a total and complete joke," he said. REUTERS

Struggling Germany seeks 'orderly' tackling of migrant crisis

Germany appealed on Sunday for a rapid return to "orderly procedures" in dealing with Europe's migrant crisis, as the continent's most powerful nation acknowledged it could scarcely cope with thousands of asylum seekers arriving daily.

A week after Chancellor Angela Merkel effectively opened German borders to asylum seekers, one senior minister said the country had reached its limits. Bild newspaper reported that Berlin wants to reintroduce frontier controls temporarily, affecting arrivals from Austria first.

Germany has halted train traffic from Austria, a spokeswoman for Austrian rail company OeBB said on Sunday. She said the head of the German rail company told his Austrian counterpart of the decision.

Amid political bickering among European governments, the crisis claimed yet more lives — 28 migrants drowned off a Greek island on Sunday when their boat sank, the coast guard said.

Fed to dominate week of central bank meetings

China's slowdown.

It is likely to be a key worry for the Fed and a 14 percent drop in Chinese imports over the past year.

The U.S. Federal Reserve takes center stage in the coming week, eclipsing industry data from China, another grim inflation reading from the euro zone and rate decisions in Japan and Switzerland.

Guessing whether the Fed hikes rates on Thursday or opts for a later date, perhaps December, is something of a futile exercise because even the rate setters appear to be wavering and the decision will probably come down to the wire.

The U.S. Federal Reserve building in Washington, D.C. / GETTY IMAGES

An unexpected drop in the jobless rate to 5.1 percent and an upward revision in second quarter growth to 3.7 percent support calls for a hike as the labor market tightens and utilization is at its best level since the global financial crisis.

Yet, futures only price a 24 percent chance of a hike as emerging markets, particularly China, struggle, inflation remains benign and some notable Fed watchers, like former Treasury Secretary Larry Summers, argue against a hike.

"My best guess is that the committee is also confused about what the right decision is, and as a result they are waiting to the last minute with making a decision," Torsten Sloek, the chief international economist at Deutsche Bank said.

"The cost of this approach is that market expectations become unanchored but they may view this as a small cost relative to sending strong signals ahead of a meeting where there seems to be limited consensus among (rate setting) members," Sloek said.

Data on Sunday showed growth in China's investment and factory output missed forecasts in August, raising the chances that third-quarter economic growth will dip below 7 percent for the first time since the global crisis.

Nuclear official

Iran says uranium exploration results promising

Preliminary exploration surveys for raw uranium in Iran are progressing well but it is too early to announce any discoveries, the spokesman for the Atomic Energy Agency of Iran (AEOI) was quoted as saying on Sunday.

Behrouz Kamalvandi spoke to the ISNA agency a day after AEOI chief Ali Akbar Salehi was quoted by state news agency IRNA as saying recent "discoveries" had made Iran confident of its reserves and a new mine would become operational soon.

The discovery of raw uranium, which can be refined to make nuclear fuel, would make Iran's disputed nuclear program more self-sufficient and raise concerns among those who fear the program is aimed at developing a bomb, a charge Iran denies. REUTERS

THIS IS SPARTA

The Foreman Forecast

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN IS A CNN CORRESPONDENT AND AUTHOR OF THE UPCOMING BOOK "MY YEAR OF RUNNING DANGEROUSLY."

Like the cast of "300" you can bet the GOP candidates spent the weekend spray-painting their abs and girding their loins, because it's debate time again! The second meeting of the Republican contenders (hosted by CNN and moderated by my pal, Jake Tapper) will dominate coverage, and it is the centerpiece of my three things to watch this week in politics.

1. "THIS IS WHERE WE FIGHT!": The other candidates tried ignoring him, pointing out his mistakes, and even mocking his hair. Yet Donald Trump has become the unstoppable force; steadily rising in the polls, improving his favorability, and seemingly having a blast. Sure, the election is still more than a year away, but after watching Rick Perry get carried off on his shield you can bet the others will launch the sharpest attacks yet on the front-runner — and I would not be surprised to see Carly Fiorina lead the charge.

2. WAR ELEPHANTS: Those surreptitious videos of Planned Parenthood reps may not mean much to folks who dismiss them as unfair sneak attacks, but they triggered a battle cry for conservatives on Capitol Hill. Expect the House of Representatives to vote this week on a proposal to cut all funds for PP unless the group stops offering abortions — which of course is not going to happen. And even if you don't care about this issue, you might care about this legislation. Because there are rumbles the dispute could lead to — you guessed it — another government shutdown.

3. THE HOT GATES: Meanwhile, on the Democratic front Hillary Clinton's phalanx will continue trying to anchor its defenses against what has become a troubling slide in the polls. Yes, her foot soldiers are quick and correct to say that she is still the favorite for the nomination, but her once-seemingly invulnerable position looks considerably weaker now than it did a few months back. Step 1: Wait for the GOP debate to end, then attack the winner. Fast.

Oh no! Julia Roberts divorce rumors!

Is there trouble in paradise for Roberts? ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

I generally don't like to hear bad news about Julia Roberts, despite her frosty relationship with the press. So these reports about moving trucks appearing outside her Malibu home while she's across the country for New York Fashion Week are truly troubling. According to Radar Online, the presence of the vehicles confirms reports of strife between Roberts and husband Danny Moder, which is just not cool. "The marriage is on the rocks," a source previously told the website. "There are a lot of issues with money. Julia said she doled out millions of dollars in mortgage payments for [Moder's father]. She helped him out for at least five years, and she got tired of footing the bill. It became a bone of contention between her and Danny." Enough of a bone that he'd sneakily move his stuff out while she's off being all glamorous and junk? Apparently, though I really hope not.

Don't mess with Jake Gyllenhaal's fast food

While promoting his Toronto International Film Festival premiere of "Demolition," Gyllenhaal copped to a youthful turn at letter-writing when KFC discontinued his favorite menu item. "When I was a little child, I was at school and we were supposed to learn how to write letters and complaint letters. And so I decided to write to Kentucky Fried Chicken and tell them that I was upset that they had discontinued Chicken Littles, which were a particular type of mini hamburger with fried chicken in the middle of it," Gyllenhaal admits. "It was deeply upsetting to me at the time and I felt like they should bring them back." KFC did in fact bring them back, but not until 2012. Still, a delayed victory is a victory. "I think I indirectly had something to do with that," he jokes. "It's empowering and I encourage most people, if they can, to really express themselves."

Taylor Swift on 'Law & Order: SVU'? Of course

Taylor Swift has made no secret of her love for long-running NBC staple "Law & Order: SVU," even going so far as naming one of her cats, Olivia Benson, after Mariska Hargitay's character. So if she loves the show so much, why doesn't she just marry it? Or at least do a cameo on it? I mean, literally anyone can get at least an episode of "Law & Order." Well, as it turns out, Swift is working on doing just that, at least according to Hargitay. "We just talked about it," the actress says of getting Swift onto the show. "We're going to wait until the end of the tour to see how it goes. But it's in the air." Oh good. Carry on.

Swift fans, get excited.

A new kind of warrior

Interview. Lee Jones takes on the role of a sensitive fighter in "The Bastard Executioner."

It's a bit of a jump to go from motorcycle gangs to the violence of medieval Wales, but that's exactly what Kurt Sutter has done in moving from "Sons of Anarchy" to his new series, "The Bastard Executioner." The show stars newcomer Lee Jones as Wilkin Brattle, a conflicted warrior. It's the Australian actor's first American role, but he's rolling with it. "It's a lot to take in, but it's very exciting," he says.

He describes Brattle as "a very spiritual yet tortured man. He's a former knight of Edward I, who's searching for a higher calling in life. He gets backed into a corner and has to fight for survival, and that leads him into becoming the executioner."

The show is clearly quite different from the world of "Sons," but there are some parallels. "It's about a very violent world, and family has a huge part in this — and also vengeance," explains Jones.

Not only was Jones a newcomer to the American TV scene, he was also a newcomer to the work of Sutter. He admits he "hadn't really" seen any of Sutter's earlier show, and he didn't try to fake any knowledge about it.

"No point in bluffing. I wasn't going to do that. I have seen bits, and what I've seen is amazing. This is very different for Kurt," he says. "I think people are kind of surprised by it, but thematically it's very close to what he focuses on. It's very visceral ideas of dark

Fight scenes

With all of that fighting, Jones had to learn how to be a warrior. It was a bit of a change for him, though he had done a different form of fight choreography before. "I had [done it] for the stage. It's very different. It's my new favorite thing, though — I love it."

But no medieval warrior would be complete without a noble steed. "I'm doing a lot of horse riding in this. That's also my new favorite thing," he explains.

That's certainly very true of Brattle, who seems to loathe violence but has, unfortunately, a high skill level with it and can't stop getting drawn back in to fighting. Jones jokingly calls him "a sensitive badass," given how much he gets into scrapes but feels conflicted about it. There's a pretty high level of gore, but Jones says he can "stand a lot. I've had to stand a lot already. It gets very gory, but it's a medieval piece. This is a violent world that we're in, so nothing's out of place. It's very real."

There was one moment that made him hesitate, however. "I had to deal with a snake the other day. I was surprisingly OK. I was a little worried for a second, but I actually really enjoyed it."

HOW TO GET AHEAD

Make your MBA application stand out from the crowd.

Top MBA programs are highly selective — New York University's Stern School of Business, for example, accepted just 18 percent of full-time MBA applicants.

So, how do you get into that 18 percent? TopMBA.com asked admissions directors how applicants can stand out.

Be yourself

It sounds clichéd, but it's true: Business schools aren't looking for some preordained version of the perfect MBA candidate. They actually want to get to know the real you and see how your personality suits their community.

That means giving an honest appraisal of yourself. Don't just highlight things you believe will impress an admissions team.

"I'd rather see an application where a true personality shows through with a few rough edges than a completely polished application with no personality," says David Simpson, London Business School's admissions director. And anyway, you don't want to end up at a place that doesn't suit your personality, either.

Do your homework

Researching an institution and its programs shows your desire to attend a school — and you should try to convey this in your application.

We're not just talking about reading the program's website and then making tiny tweaks to your admissions essay. Make a real effort to get to know the school, visit the campus and talk to staff, students and alumni.

"It's like dating," says Leigh Gauthier, admissions director at Toronto's Rotman School. "It's helpful to know how keen you are."

As NYU Stern's assistant dean of admissions, Isser Gallogly says: "An MBA is something you do only once in your life. It is well worth taking the time and money to do the research and to visit the school."

Show you know your stuff

jobs & education

Again, this isn't just about winning over an admissions team; it's about finding a school that can fulfill your ambitions. Knowing what you hope to gain from the degree is important, but demonstrating how you intend to spend your time at school is also important. Find out if there are any initiatives, clubs, competitions or field trips you want to take part in before you apply. Speaking with enthusiasm about your plans to make the most of your chosen school's program can only serve you well come interview day.

Ortiz thankful after No. 500

David Ortiz got the day off Sunday, a day after belting the 500th home run of his career in St. Petersburg, Florida, against the Tampa Bay Rays. Ortiz wrote on Twitter Sunday, "Good morning America, thank you to all my fans and teammates for the support. Thx #RedSoxNation 4 the support...u been w/ us all year, couldn't be more proud 2 be part of NE! That HR was 4 all of us!" Only 26 other MLB players have hit 500 home runs in their respective careers.

Buffalo, St. Louis pull off major upsets in Week 1

NFL. The new-look Bills, who host the Pats this coming Sunday, were the big Week 1 winners.

It was a disappointing season opener for Indianapolis as the off-season hype built around their offense dissolved in the face of the Bills' defense. Andrew Luck (26 for 49, 243 yards, 2 TD, 2 INT) had a dismal day, averaging only five yards per attempt. Rex Ryan's Bills won by a score of 27-14.

Jets 31, Browns 10

Johnny Manziel (13-24, 182, 1 TD, 1 INT) put the Browns up 7-0 with a 54-yard touchdown pass to Travis Benjamin on his second throw after starting quarterback Josh McCown left the game with a concussion. The day went downhill from there for the Browns, as the Jets triumphed behind Chris Ivory, who ran for 92 yards and two TDs.

Rams 34, Seahawks 31 day. The Seahawks began overtime with another questionable decision, attempting an onside kick. The Rams recovered and kicked a field goal before stopping the Seahawks and Marshawn Lynch (18 carries, 73 yards).

Packers 31, Bears 23

A late Clay Matthews interception helped the Packers hold off the Bears in a surprisingly close NFC North matchup. Reigning NFL MVP Aaron Rodgers threw three touchdown passes despite the absence of star receiver Jordy Nelson.

Dolphins 17, Redskins 10

Jarvis Landry took a punt return 69 yards to the end zone for the deciding score. Dolphins first-round pick, Devante Parker, got on the field but was held without a reception.

Chiefs 27, Texans 20

The Chiefs survived 11 fourth-quarter points from Houston. Alex Smith threw three touchdowns for Kansas City, two to tight end Travis Kelce, who had six catches for 106 yards.

Panthers 20, Jaguars 9

Cam Newton (18 for 31, 175, TD, INT) hooked up with Jericho Cotchery for one touchdown, and Josh Norman returned an interception 30 yards for a score while recovering a fumble.

NFL looks into pair of incidents from Pats game

The first Patriots game of the 2015 season featured plenty of off-field drama last Thursday night as the NFL was, throughout the weekend, looking into both an incident in which a Patriots fan was allegedly kicked by a Steelers assistant coach as well as a well-publicized headset issue.

The Steelers denied that tight end coach James Daniel kicked a Patriots fan in the back of the leg and screamed at him while walking to the visitors' locker room at Gillette Stadium at halftime of last Thursday's game.

"We have conducted an internal inquiry into the alleged incident involving assistant coach James Daniel at the Patriots stadium Thursday night," Pittsburgh president Art Rooney II said in a statement on Sunday. "After interviews with Coach Daniel as well as other personnel who witnessed the alleged encounter, we find no corroboration that Coach Daniel was involved in any physical altercation with a fan."

Daniel also was said to have shouted at a police officer who questioned him about the incident with the fan, witnesses told ESPN. As for the Steelers' complaint that the Patriots' radio broadcast was being piped into their headsets during the first quarter of Thursday's game, the NFL has cleared the Patriots of any wrongdoing.

"[It] involved no manipulation by any individual and the Patriots had nothing to do with it," said league spokesman Michael Signora. "[It was] entirely attributable to an electrical issue made worse by inclement weather."
